Synopsis

"Lee brings viewers into the professional and personal worlds of established superstars like TOKiMONSTA and Alison Wonderland, newcomers like Sherelle and hardworking underground artists like Tygapaw. Beautifully shot and creatively edited." - Variety

Follow the leading female artists in dance music, REZZ, Nervo, Alison Wonderland, TOKiMONSTA and more, as they reckon with inequality in the music industry.

Electronic music was born from the ideals of diversity, community, and inclusivity; yet in the last two years, only 7% of Billboard's Top 100 DJs were women. Filmed over the summer festival season, Underplayed presents a portrait of the current status of the gender, ethnic, and sexual equality issues through the lens of the female pioneers, next-generation artists and industry leaders who are championing the change, and inspiring a more diverse pool of role models for future generations. Ultimately, the film explores how gender disparity happens; a theme that transcends music and finds relevance in many of today's industries.
